Art class was over, but Vashti sat
glued to her chair.

Her paper was empty.

Vashti's teacher leaned over the blank paper.

"Ah! A polar bear
in a snow storm," she said.

"Very funny!" said Vashti.

"I just CAN'T draw!"

Her teacher smiled.

"Just make a mark and See where it takes you."

Vashti grabbed a marker and gave the paper a good, strong jab.

"There!"

Her teacher picked up the paper

"HMMMMM."

She pushed the paper toward Vashti and quietly said,
"Now sign it."

Vashti thought for a moment.

"Well, maybe I can't draw,
but I CAN sign my name."

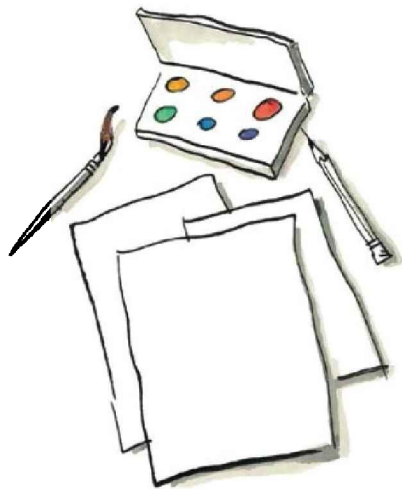

The next week,
when Vashti walked into art class,
she was surprised to see what was

It was the little dot
she had drawn — HER DOT!
All framed in swirly gold!

"Hmmp! I can make a better dot than THAT!"

She opened her never-before-used set of

Vashti painted and painted.

A red dot.

A purple dot.

A yellow dot.

A blue dot.

The blue mixed with the yellow.
She discovered that she could make a GREEN dot.

Vashti kept experimenting.
Lots of little dots in many colors.

"If I can make little dots,
I can make BIG dots, too."

Vashti splashed her colors with a bigger brush on bigger paper

Vashti even made a dot
by NOT painting a dot.

At the school art show a few weeks later,
Vashti's many dots made quite a splash.

Vashti noticed a little boy
gazing up at her.

"You're a really great artist.
I wish I could draw," he said.

"I bet you can," said Vashti.

"ME? No, not me. I can't draw a straight line with a ruler."

Vashti smiled.

She handed the boy a

"Show me."

The boy's pencil shook

Vashti stared at the boy's squiggle.

And then she said...

"Please ... sign it."

Dedicated to Mr. Matson, my 7th grade math teacher, who dared me to "make my mark."
